

WM 684 Trends in Global Christianity
Fall 2014

Instructor: Todd M. Johnson, Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary
Teaching Assistant: Joo Hye Kim

I. Course Description

The course is an overview of trends in global Christianity and Christian mission over the past one hundred years. It covers the whole world with lectures comparing the global context of 1910 and 2010, including each of the major Christian traditions, as well as trends in world religions. The past 100 years is viewed through the lens of Christian mission by analyzing data on missionaries, Bible translation, TV/radio broadcasting, and other forms of evangelization. The course also covers the rise of global Pentecostalism and the role of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in development and mission. This course can be taken for credit.

II. Learning Objectives

1. Students will comprehend the expansion of the world Christian movement, especially in the past 100 years.
2. Students will analyze the role of globalization in the spreading of the gospel.
3. Students will examine both similarities and differences in world religions.
4. Students will comprehend the biblical, theological, and historical, and current perspectives of the integration of development and mission.
5. Students will analyze the role of Pentecostals in the spreading of the gospel.
6. Students will examine and assess the efforts of Christians to alleviate social problems.

III. Grading

1. Personal reflections on the books in the required reading. Students should keep a running journal of the summaries. 30%
2. Paper (c. 20 pp. double-spaced with footnotes/endnotes and bibliography as appropriate): This paper should look at a subject in the trends in global Christianity. 70%
